Hey there Liz...the LAPD has internal documents about events that are for intelligence sharing. They are not public.

Hi Liz,

I'm not aware of that list being produced on a weekly basis. LAPD usually provides a daily event list. You may want to check with their media relations folks.

Best,
Peter

Hi Peter,

I was wondering if I could get a copy of the latest lists for upcoming events around the city. I've seen these passed out at Fire Commission meetings, and they include everything from big festivals, to marches and rallies. I'm hoping to get information some events happening this weekend, particularly on Saturday, having to do with immigration.

Terrific, thank you – the only issue with that time is it's during Police Commission. I think they might have a special meeting scheduled that day? If it's the only time Chief Moore is available and it clashes with commission, I can see if someone else can cover commission.

Sorry if I wasn't clear – I meant Chief Beck! I attended a roll call at Rampart with Chief Beck on May 24. Josh was there, but I know he's out of the country this week. Chief Beck said he still has his field notebook from his first day at Rampart and that he would "close it out" later that day. The godson query also relates to Chief Beck – several people have said Beck is Gates' godson.

Subject: Looking for interviews for follow-up on video release policy

Afternoon folks:

So I'm putting together a follow-up on the video release issue, and was hoping to get a better understanding of what went into the production of what the department released yesterday.

The method you guys took, in releasing a video with narration and an educational component, was pretty different from what we've seen in other cities with a release policy, who normally just issue raw video. I was hoping to talk with someone involved in that decision making process (presumably Cmdr. Hamilton, since he was in the video), and why you chose to go that route.

I also want to talk with someone about how these will be handled going forward (community briefings vs. simply putting the videos on the LAPD website) and the decision making process that goes into selecting the clips of video that will be released. Obviously you only released portions of the Chavez incident yesterday, and the segments of the incident that were skimmed over have drawn some criticism.

Really, we just want to get a deeper understanding of how this whole process is going to work going forward. I can do this by phone or face-to-face, whatever is easier for you guys and whoever you connect me with.

Thanks,
James

Hi Patricia,

I have messaged Josh Rubenstein several times about this and haven't gotten a response. I believe he's now out of the country.

I am writing a story about racial epithets that Brian McCartin made to a prosecutor while investigating the Cleamon Johnson case in 2014.

The prosecutor and two other attorneys present at the time have submitted memos to the court about the incident.

Deputy Dist. Atty Robert Rabbani wrote that McCartin spoke about his days on patrol and "said something to the effect of, 'I was out there with those niggers.'" He also suggested it was not unusual to use the slur in one's own home.

The Los Angeles County District Attorney's office said it notified the LAPD about this incident and informed your agency that McCartin had been added to its database of problem officers.

Can you tell me if McCartin was ever investigated for this May 14, 2014 incident? (He retired in June 2015.)

Can I also get a response from the LAPD about the incident and McCartin's racial slurs?

Thank you,

Hi Josh,

I'm writing another story about work comp and LAPD officers. One of the guys I'll mention is former officer Jonathan Hall, who went out on injury leave and then got caught on video running SCUBA classes from a dive shop he owns in Long Beach. He got fired for that. But in a recent interview, he told me he was the target of another internal affairs investigation involving a bid he made to sell the department SCUBA equipment. He said he went to a board of rights on that, where the charges were dropped because there was no evidence of wrong doing. Can you confirm that?

Thanks.

Subject: Looking for interviews for follow-up on video release policy

Afternoon folks:

So I'm putting together a follow-up on the video release issue, and was hoping to get a better understanding of what went into the production of what the department released yesterday.

The method you guys took, in releasing a video with narration and an educational component, was pretty different from what we've seen in other cities with a release policy, who normally just issue raw video. I was hoping to talk with someone involved in that decision making process (presumably Cmdr. Hamilton, since he was in the video), and why you chose to go that route.

I also want to talk with someone about how these will be handled going forward (community briefings vs. simply putting the videos on the LAPD website) and the decision making process that goes into selecting the clips of video that will be released. Obviously you only released portions of the Chavez incident yesterday, and the segments of the incident that were skimmed over have drawn some criticism.

Really, we just want to get a deeper understanding of how this whole process is going to work going forward. I can do this by phone or face-to-face, whatever is easier for you guys and whoever you connect me with.

Thanks,
James

Terrific, thank you – the only issue with that time is it's during Police Commission. I think they might have a special meeting scheduled that day? If it's the only time Chief Moore is available and it clashes with commission, I can see if someone else can cover commission.

Sorry if I wasn't clear – I meant Chief Beck! I attended a roll call at Rampart with Chief Beck on May 24. Josh was there, but I know he's out of the country this week. Chief Beck said he still has his field notebook from his first day at Rampart and that he would "close it out" later that day. The godson query also relates to Chief Beck – several people have said Beck is Gates' godson.

Hi Josh and Trish,

This was on the list of events we could attend for the Beck profile:

June 27, 2018, 11:30 AM: Chief Beck last day at work at PHF

Is this still on the table? I know he's having the big party at the Academy in the afternoon, but if we could stop by his office as he's packing up and saying goodbye, that would be great, too. Let me know.

Right now we have a profile scheduled (I need to start writing!) and will also do a feature about his last day.

Subject: 41.18d?

Hi Josh! I hope all is well. I'm writing a story about the Jones settlement and I wanted to check: Is the LAPD currently enforcing 41.18d (the ban on sleeping or lying on the sidewalk) during the daytime hours?

If so, is it possible to get any statistics about how many citations have been issued?

I can be reached at 213-237-3013 or on my cell phone, [REDACTED] Thanks!

Emily
